

NOW-NYC Service Fund Presents

Working Your Career in a Downsizing World:
An Eight Point Survival Guide

Thursday, March 19th, 6:30 pm

If a foggy work future has you concerned, take control of the things you can. This difficult economic climate may be changing all the rules, but it's also a time for new opportunities. Whether you've lost your job or need to build up your "career insurance," executive career coach, Dr. Mary Anne Walsh, will present strategies you can use for getting a job or keeping your job in 2009.

Learn how to:

- Differentiate yourself in the market place
- Develop a new mindset toward a new work place
- Leverage your skills for a competitive edge
- Create your career brand
- Get your digital house in order
(If you don't show up in Google you do not exist!)

Dr. Mary Anne Walsh works with numerous professionals helping them to excel in their careers. She develops global talent by providing services for both corporations and individuals on executive coaching, career management and cross-cultural organizational issues. In addition to her private practice, Walsh Advisors, LLC, she is a Five O'Clock Club-certified career coach and is a frequent speaker at international conferences and educational seminars. Her dynamic and often humorous presentations make her a sought after presenter on professional career management topics.

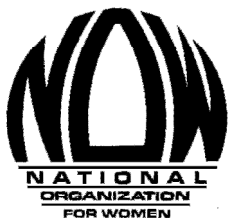

This program is part of the NOW-NYC Service Fund's ongoing series to help women gain critical skills for advancing their careers and empowering themselves inside and outside of the workplace.
